Bonus Rules Questions

Question: On a fast break A-1 is attempting a successful lay-up when B-1 from behind pushes A-1. The Lead official rules and intentional personal foul on B-1.

How many free throws should be awarded to A-1?

Answer: A-1 would be awarded 2 free throws. The fact that A-1 was fouled in the act of shooting a successful try has no bearing on the penalty. The penalty for an intentional personal foul is 2 free throws for the player who was fouled and the ball will be awarded to the offended team closest spot to where the foul occurred. (Rule 4-19-3, Rule 10-7 Penalty 4)

Question: Defender B-1 standing at the free throw line in Team B's from court, facing opponent A-1 who is dribbling near center circle. A-2 sets a legal screen on defender B-1. A-1 dribbles around screener A-2 and successfully gets head and shoulders past the B-1 on a drive to the basket. B-2 is standing on the lower block on the free throw lane line facing the basket. Dribbler A-1 drives toward the basket and becomes airborne on a try for goal. A-1 displaces stationary defender B-2 contacting him/her in the back when returning to the floor.

What is the correct ruling?

Answer: Player Control Foul. While it is true B-2 never obtained legal guarding position, every player is entitled to a spot on the playing court, provided the player gets there first without illegally contacting an opponent. The contact created by B-1 displaced A-2 and should be ruled a player control foul. (Rule 4-19-6, 4-37-3).

NUTRITION 101: What Is Nutrition?

If we asked 100 people to define the word Nutrition we would probably get 100 different answers because there are so many aspects to the concept of nutrition. Most people would define nutrition as the food that we eat, but nutrition really is a science. Nutrition is the study of food, but also the various nutrients and other chemical components that make up the food that we eat and the effects that consumption of that food has on overall health. Our definition of nutrition would not be complete without also considering the factors that affect the overall availability and daily choices we make regarding food.

Much of nutrition seems like common sense, but if it really were common sense then everyone would be eating a well-balanced, adequate and varied diet each and every day. The quote from Thomas Paine says it well, "Common sense requires a common knowledge." The concepts related to nutrition are not difficult, but it is important that you can gain a good working knowledge of key terms and concepts related to nutrition so that you can make sound decisions.

Why is all of this so important? Making good decisions related to nutrition can positively impact our overall health and well-being and more importantly decrease our risk of premature death. Of the various factors that impact our risk of premature death, 60% of our risk is associated with individual behaviors (40%) and other social and environmental factors (20%). The other 40% comes from genetics (30%) and health care (10%).¹ That means that you can personally decrease your risk of an early exit by making healthy choices.

While these choices may not be solely nutrition-related choices there is a strong correlation between dietary choices and the leading causes of the death. Five of the ten leading causes of death (heart disease, cancer, stroke, Alzheimer's and diabetes) are significantly influenced by dietary choices. Diets high in fruits and vegetables, whole grains, low-fat dairy and protein choices and low in processed food, salt, sugar, trans fats and alcohol correlate with lower risk and positive health impacts. On the flip side, diets high in processed foods, added sugar, salt, trans fats, and excess calories have been associated with higher levels of obesity, diabetes, osteoporosis, heart disease, stroke, inflammation, cancer, hypertension, and dementia and the list could go on from there.

Every day you are bombarded with nutrition information in the news, social media, print media, and through word of mouth from "experts" and friends who claim to have found the secret to unlocking weight loss, good health, and longevity. The best advice here is use your common sense. If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Even if the information seems to be based in science. Do your homework. Often the information we receive comes in a 2 minute news story, a headline or a 140 character message. Seek out the source of the information and read the whole story before you jump to change your entire approach. Remember that the most credible sources of nutrition information will come from licensed nutrition professionals (i.e. RD-registered dietitians), scientific organizations, health-care providers, government agencies, non-profit professional health organizations, and scientific peer-reviewed publications.

So, what's the take home message? You can positively impact your health and decrease your risk of premature death by making sound choices. Everything you put into your body is a choice. Let's strive to make more good choices than not so good choices. Remember, A goal without a plan is just a wish.- Antoine de Saint-Exupery.

Game Tracker Journal

You have likely heard the saying, “a goal without a plan is just a wish,” and this age-old adage rings so true for all people pursuing all types of endeavors.

And for basketball officials embarking on the 2017-2018 season absent a basic strategy on how to achieve a stated desire -- a better schedule; advancement to the next level -- you are in a rudderless boat on an open sea hoping the winds of fate blow you to your destination.

Seeking officiating success described in this manner seems laughable, but yet many officials take this approach with their beloved avocation.

But Ref, don't panic now...Help is on the way in the form of the new, and first of its kind, GameTracker Journal.

This latest publication from long time IAABO members Billy Martin, Tim Malloy and Al Battista, the creators of Ref60.com, is an innovative tool that provides a template for every basketball official, at every level, to create your own realistic roadmap helping to guide you to your desired destination - one game at a time.
